

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An optical switching system for use with catheter-based analysis and treatment. The use of an optical switching system allows one or more interferometric systems to use the same fiber, control of the duty cycle to protect the sensitive optical devices from harmful back-reflections generated by a treatment laser, and switching through several interferometric light sources in order to determine geometry and composition in the path of the catheter.